Synopsis

T. Lobsang Rampa was preordained to be a Tibetan priest, a sign from the stars that could not be ignored. T. Lobsang Rampa linked the East to the West better than any other writer in history. His accounts of a multitude of spiritual, occult, and psychic phenomenon can be found in such works as The Third Eye, The Hermit, Chapters of Life, The Rampa Story, Feeding the Flame, My Visit to Venus, Tibetan Sage, and Twilight.

I first read this book when I was a teenager (fifty years ago now) knowing then that it was probably a fraud that was written by a Surrey plumber. I must say, that nevertheless, I enjoyed it then. However, this second time around I was not so enthusiastic about the book. Perhaps it is because I have now enjoyed an extra fifty years of living and experience, and am more able to see the flaws in it. Perhaps it is also because of all the typographical mistakes in the text, which I put down to its translation into an e-book. All-in-all I am glad I only wasted $2.99 on buying this book.

The author is a fake, do some research on Internet.

Except for the many typos, this was a very entertaining book. I didn't care if it was fact or fiction as Oriental religions or beliefs have always fascinated me. I read the whole collection on Spanish paperback many decades ago.

This reproduction is terrible!!! The print is so small that you need a magnifying glass to read it!!! Unless you have superior (better than 20/20) vision DO NOT order this book!!!

Takes me back to the days of my early twenties when I was entranced with Eastern Philosophy topics such as this. A good read for the open-minded. :)

I've learned a lot from the Third Eye many years ago. I used to have nightmares around that time. I just thought it was nightmares and learned to understand the visions. Now I don't have nightmares anymore. I'm not afraid if I cannot move when I wake up or about to go asleep because I know I'm either going to astral travel or coming back from it. : D

I enjoyed this book. I loved reading about the experiences throughout. I believe we have so much potential within but Western society rarely acknowledges these abilities. It was nice to read about a culture so open.

When you study the many Buddhist books out on the market today you can appreciate an authentic Buddhist when you read about one. T. Lobsang Rampa was an authentic Buddhist, in fact it is quite clear that he was a Buddha. In "The Third Eye" there is a chapter that starts you on the road to enlightenment, the actual first step, which the new books that are out today and some of the older ones do not elucidate on. It is the necessary step to take and command before you can become fully enlightened. Why is it that this mandatory 'first step' is missing from all the other books? If you are well acquainted with Buddhism, you will appreciate Dr. Rampa as the greatest and the most highly trained Buddhist in existence during the 20th Century. Read all 19 of his books and put all the pieces together with his 'plain English'. The more you know about Buddhism, the more you will cherish the writings of Dr. Rampa. He is the Buddha of the 20th Century.
