Synopsis

Our life choices are either ours to make or already determined. All of this gets blurry or complicated for our protagonist. A life-changing altercation will be an obstacle or a gift in disguise depending on our choices. There will always be good or evil in everything we do. It is not destiny but our own doing. Life is convoluted but this same complexity will establish our part in society. It will verify our place in the social order but it will not mold who we are like; when we see a baker, we don't expect it to bake every time it. We can expect an intricate lifestyle maybe a family but definitely a child with a father and mother, maybe bills to pay, a story to say, maybe life skills in other, a party that. Perhaps it may help you decide if my story is a next little step towards evolution in human history or just another person claiming another. Or maybe a ladder on both claims. Whatever it is at least there was a part that John Ray Tanger (J.R.T.) filled. It may not quench your thirst for knowledge but one thing is for certain you have learned a bit about how our protagonist view a certain situations that will affect his decision. If it is for the good or the bad is entirely up to the readers. This story will help the reader practice their own decision making. That same thought will apply in our lives and conclusions. One can respect you, but this doesn't mean one must like you. A sharp mind is definitely an advantage in school, campus, work place and retirement plan. It's time to take control of a critical period of our time. The critical truth that will be explored in the story by the end you will always be you. It's not fate it's just human nature that is somehow a part of our evolution. We are meant to have mistakes, it's what we do next is the true question. By this way we are having an advantage from competition. This will harbor our version of the truth that may or may not affect the perspective of reality. I know we seem to have adversities now but trust yourself that you will get through to it, it's not pretending or a made up word but a sheer necessity for our race. Our very existence challenge by ever changing path because it has too and we must try to just go with it. The beyond will be uncertain for sure and all we can do is be ready for some of the uncertainty. Always remember that time don't wait for anyone. The reasonable action is required for us, but not sacrificing our humanity.
