Here is an educational gardening book that the Pacific Northwest coastal region has needed for a long time. Thank you, Carla, for putting together the 'good plant' lists with a wealth of first-hand gardening knowledge that lets the reader know that here is someone who 'walks the walk' and 'talks the talk' in west coast gardening. Carla has a writing style that makes for easy reading making the book even more valuable because it welcomes you to snuggle up and read a chapter or two on one of those rainy coastal days. Filled with down-to-earth gardening suggestions, this gardening manual is rounded out by a very complete discussion of the gardening pests, including weeds, animals and plant diseases, common to our coastal region. (Ray and Jan McNeilan, authors of The Pacific Northwest Gardener's Book of Lists) The notion of micro-climate gardening is popping up increasingly. Coastal Gardening in the Pacific Northwest is Pacific Northwest Coast gardening for every gardener, offering innovative and practical garden solutions unique to Pacific Coast living as well as truly inspirational wisdom applicable to any gardeners' micro-climate. Thanks for a good read! I'm already planning ahead to next year. (Marcia Grubb, president-elect, Oregon Master Gardener Association) Sure beach dwellers enjoy a long growing season, but they also face a wave of unique gardening challenges such as high winds, salt spray, sandy soil and excessive sun exposure. Carla Albright's book "Coastal Gardening in the Pacific Northwest" discusses easy ways to conquer these challenges and create a beautiful garden that is tough enough to withstand seashore assaults. While Albright lives in Portland, Ore., she offers plenty of advice useful to coastal mountain and dune gardeners in California. She also includes a quiz to assess the conditions in your garden, templates to record weather throughout the year, grids that help you design plant placement and a list of plants to avoid. (Los Angeles Daily News)

Carla Albright is an Oregon State Master Gardener as well as a Penn State Master Gardener who writes a gardening column for the Tillamook Headlight Herald. She teaches an OSU Master Gardener class and works as a professional gardener in several coastal gardens in Oregon. Albright's floral and landscape photos have been published in several Pennsylvania magazines.

This book by a Master Gardener, is the best for gardening in the Coastal Pacific Northwest....for veggies and flowers too. I have been gardening here for 15 years still with some monumental failures in crops. I have microclimates and she shows me how to use them better. Thank you Carla!!

The book is full of helpful information. My problem with the book is there is an abundance of black & white photos and a limited amount of color photos. Let's be honest, who doesn't enjoy looking at all the pretty color pictures in gardening books. The beautiful colorful pictures of lovely gardens helps me get through the bleak winters.

This book is a great resource for anyone living on the coast in the Pacific Northwest. Not all plants do well on the coast and many other plants survive beautifully. I highly recommend this book. It can help you save energy, money and disappointment on purchasing and planting the appropriate plants and shrubs.

Not what I expected. I was hoping for larger color photos. Lots of text, small ok quality photos.

Finally a book specifically for novice coastal gardeners! How I wish I had had this book BEFORE I planted my coastal garden--I could have saved much time, money and sweat learning the what, which, where, how and when of northwest coastal planting. This is a comprehensive yet detailed book all those gardening in zones 7-9 should keep close at hand. Carla's suggestions on site analysis and planning, soil preparation and plant choices are valuable. Being a fellow Master Gardener, I appreciate and applaud her approach to sustainable gardening practices and her emphasis on gardening with few chemicals. Her writing is clear, concise and pleasant to read.
