Susan Lieberman Walker, Ph.D. was a clinical psychologist for many years before changing careers to become a middle school language arts teacher. She works at a private school in Bellevue, Washington where she has the luxury of teaching her students for three years and helps them to discover the writer's voice inside each of them. She is a member of the Bahá'í Faith. Susan lives in Seattle with her family.

A heart warming account of life and faith. Honest and personal, it echoes the sufferings and journey of many. Thank you.

Written with a true view of the Baha'i world. Very insightful and believing and written with a feeling of self adventure and with an amazing learning experience. Truly heartfelt and wonderful.

A very interesting read. Lucid and engaging.

It was okay. I would actually recommend it to someone who is just learning about Baha'ism.

couldn't put it down until finished!

Interesting journey with a wonderful outcome.

I am a Bahai and could relate to it

Great!
