Peace In Passing: Comfort For Loving Humans During Animal Transitions

Synopsis

Has your animal passed on? In one respect, losing your animal companion can be as hard - or harder - than losing your human family and friends. Why? Most of the time you have to decide when and how to let them go. Did you put them down too early? Did you wait too long? Did they suffer? Afterwards, you miss them fiercely! And to make it harder, some people don't understand your grief. "It was only an animal, for goodness sake, get over it!" This book was written to help you find peace about your animal's loss in a way that honors your grief AND mutual love. The author, an intuitive animal communicator, shares real-life cases that help turn your grief into an enduring love story to give comfort beyond measure.

Customer Reviews

After my dog Taziboy passed, a friend of mine recommended me to read this book. Easy read, and her gentle energy emanates from every page. I'm glad to encounter this book because Maribeth explains how she communicates with living animals as well as dead ones and it confirmed me that I was really communicating with Taziboy's spirit as he was passing. He was a rescue and in and out of the shelter before we adopted him so he was telling me, I felt, that not to put him down because he wanted me to be with him when he needed to go. I wasn't 100% sure but I really felt that he was afraid of going back to the shelter so I did my best to tune in with his spirit and spent his last moment together by massaging him, playing the gentle spa music in the background and talking to him and thanking him for coming into my life. He kept staring at me as if he was thanking me with all his best. He was in my arms when he finally took his last breath in our bedroom and this was my best memorable moment I ever had with him. Of course I cried my eyes out for awhile but I was so glad I trusted my intuition to listen to him communicate with me. I was in the dilemma until his last couple of days though since my husband already went to the shelter where he came from to let them know that we would be ready soon to put him to sleep. I didn't want him to suffer so I would do anything to make his passing easier, but at the same time, putting him down was not what he was asking me to do and I felt strongly that he was sending me a message that he wanted to go on his own naturally. So, I do understand the guilt and pain for some of the pet parents might go through with and reading what Maribeth talks about your pet(s) still loves you no matter how they die, helped me understand that even if I did choose to put him down, I needn't to feel guilty about it. Also, I have a friend whose dog just passed away a month before my Taziboy did and she, on the other hand, seemed to be suffering from the feeling of guilt for putting her down since she never ever had to do so with her other pets. So I gave her this book and it seems that it tremendously helped her feel of guilt free. I am so happy to know that Maribeth's book served her. And this is just a few days ago but I got an opportunity to meet Maribeth! Just like I imagined, she had such gentle energy! I thanked her for writing the book because obviously it's helping pet lovers to feel better and at peace after their loved ones passing. Although I couldn't attend her event that she was having the next day, I told her I would love to the next time I get a chance. Overall, this is a wonderful book and I highly recommend this book to any pet parents to read this just to know that you are always loved by your fur babes and that their physical death is not the end and they will continue to love you and be with you in spirit.

Excellent book. I have owned many pets throughout my life and never knew they could "talk" to their owners in the way they do, especially when it comes to the topic of death. Their emotional expressions are almost human. After reading this, I wish I could have that gift of communicating with animals as they do with us. Maribeth Decker has my recommendation

It brings me such peace to know that when the day comes that my basset hound crosses over, she'll still be with me. The stories Maribeth has chosen to include "Peace in Passing" will inspire you and help you understand how to handle the difficult transition of a pet death. Highly recommended for all pet lovers.

We worked with Maribeth during a very tough time with our dog Newton. She was able to help us communicate with him and understand his pain. I'd highly recommend this book and Maribeth for any pet communication needs.

I didn't truly understand how much we can really communicate with and understand our animals needs and wishes until this book came into my life. It is enhancing my relationship with my 11 year old dog now, and I know will be a comfort to me when the time comes for him to leave us.

I haven't lost my pet but shes getting older and this has helped to understand the process and see the beauty in it all.

Such a lovely book. I buy it regularly to send to any friend who has to wrestle with the death of their pet.

Comforting during a most difficult time!
