Customer Reviews

I have a sweet tooth that I'm trying to control to the best of my abilities. But then a book like this comes along and all my efforts go up in the air. Homemade candy is delicious. You can easily fall into a trap of eating too many so be aware of that. When I buy candy, I never buy 20 candy bars at once, that would be insane. But, when I make german fudge bars from this book, of course I will make a whole tray of them. And I will eat them. This book can do that to a person. The recipes are very good, there is something for everyone, from chocolate to granola bars, chocolate cherries and lollipops. Some of them I didn't even know you can make at home, lollipops, for example. There is a lot to experiment with in this book and I am excited to try as many of it as I can. My waistline won't be grateful for that.

Great recipes. We had about 5 of them from Christmas Day night thru the next day!

The cover of the cookbook is not indicative of recipes included. I couldn't find a recipe that coordinated with any of the pictures on the cover. I purchased your book, candy making cookbook, for my son for a school "how to" project. He chose to make marshmallows. We are confused by the recipe. The final ingredient listed is corn syrup, 1 cup 2 1/2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin. Gelatin is also listed as the first ingredient - Gelatin, 2 tbsp. The directions are not clear about what to do with the second (2 1/2 tablespoons gelatin). There aren't any photos in the book, which would be a nice addition.
