The Architecture School Survival Guide

Synopsis

Oops! Forgot to include a door! Every year new architecture students make the same mistakes, forgetting the same essential elements in their studio work. This handy guide provides basic tips and hints to help students make the most of their work. Advice ranges from the practical (how to orient a building on a site) to the thought-provoking (notions of taste) to just plain fun (how to dress, or not to dress, like an architect). All accompanied by the author's witty and beautiful illustrations. The Architecture Student's Survival Kit is a life-saving and entertaining resource for any first-year student or anyone thinking about studying architecture.

Iain Jackson is an architect and lecturer at the Liverpool School of Architecture. His publications include numerous journal entries and The Architecture of Edwin Maxwell Fry and Jane Drew (2014).

I'm no architect, but have experience in the building trades and have had lengthy interactions with a variety of design professionals. I bought this for some of my students who have expressed interest in environmental design. It's a bit advanced for my middle schoolers, but it does contain great advice that anyone with a bent toward architecture or design should consider. One of the best pieces of advice it contains is on page 20 where it suggests setting aside 30 minutes a day to read about design, architecture, and architects...and this book would be a good start. I'm not reading it cover to cover, but I am keeping it on my desk and am find it a helpful distraction as I work to incorporate design thinking into my classroom instruction.
