Food writer Carol Costenbader has cooked and preserved homegrown fruits, herbs, and vegetables for more than 35 years. Besides The Big Book of Preserving the Harvest, her books include Storey's Well-Stocked Pantry Series: Mustards, Ketchups & Vinegars and Preserving Fruits & Vegetables. Second in command of the family vegetable garden and a volunteer cook at Christian Ministries Homeless Shelter, Carol is founder of The Health Adventure and Friends of the Health Adventure, a good health teaching facility. Carol and her family divide their time between central Florida and the mountains of North Carolina.

I have started putting up my own food in earnest now instead of just some canning, etc. Dehydration is a great way for some things to be stored and I am now using my dehydrator a lot more to put up my harvest and some of my meat stores as well. This book presents some good basic info on how to go about doing this.

Enjoy these small learning/to do books !! One reviewer said they were not worth the $ that they could easily be printed out, well that said I love the fact that I can have a BOUND book to look things up and save all around my little home where others can find them and flip through ! They work for me :)

Did quick read and find the series i bought along with "Food Drying...." to be helpful. It wasn't like: it's too overwhelming". It's a handy size i can carry and review anytime, so i rate it a 5 (i love it). I like the part where it shows how to dry without the modern electric equipment.

great help with my drying efforts

very good info that you may need

This book keeps it simple and has been such a great help. If your needing basics, THIS book is the way to go. ANYONE can start drying and its not a long read to get started. Would buy again!

I have not put this booklet to use yet, but I am looking forward to it. After reading the booklet I realized that I was building my dehydrator incorrectly. Wish I had known a few of the things learned in the booklet earlier.
