In no time at all, the bodies are piling up, and the tendrils threatening both Nick's family, along with his bestselling author status spread at record speed. A stone-cold killer with family and friends is a dangerous business, but when bad people threaten Nick's Pacific Grove home, it becomes a deadly business. Nick's up to the mark, with his family and friends holding on tight for yet another McCarty journey into darkness.

Book 3 - Sins and Sanctions

El Muerto began as a joke by writer/assassin Nick McCarty's partner, Gus. In Nick's offbeat sense of violent humor, he makes El Muerto into a terrifying legend. Adding his partner Gus into the mix as Payaso his sidekick, Nick enters the realm of serial killers and terrorists with a vengeance. Nick's new boss opens the keys to the kingdom for the coldest blooded killer he's ever met. Deciding when fighting psychopathic murderers and terrorist cells hell bent on America's destruction, there is one old football cliché that fits – "winning isn't everything | it's the only thing. Nick's book tour turns into a bloody rampage, leaving little doubt he embraces his boss's new management style. Returning to his Pacific Grove refuge with family and friends, Nick decides to bring his deadly business more into the open | and business is good.

Customer Reviews

This is my second time reading this series. I love Nick and his entire family--somehow, DeLeo is able to show the action, the (sometimes wacky) humor and Nick's deadly personality from each person's point of view. Nick is The Equalizer with a MAD MAGAZINE sense of humor. Read the dialogs with "situational awareness," because this author is a genius at bringing quotes from popular culture seamlessly into conversations. Don't lose your place when you drop your reader because you're laughing so hard...and thinking "that is sooo wrong"!

Just a great read. This one has Nick McCarty his pregnant wife Rachel, daughter Jean, Deke the Australian Shepherd and partner Gus Nason. Nick and family live in Groves Point., CA. Nick's very nice house overlooks the beach. It's a place Nick and family call home. Nick never thought he could get into the family thing but now that he has he finds he's very happy being a husband to Rachel and a Father to Jean and having a son on the way. Nick's been trying to retire from his assassin job. Gus, however, thinks he should keep his hand in the game just in case. Nick's daughter Jean also has a couple of problems she wants Nick to solve. A very reluctant Nick. Nick takes a job in the sandbox. This one in Iran. Gus is along as his number two. He of course tells Rachel he's "researching" his latest Diego novel a story Rachel doesn't buy for minute one. Nick kills his man after having to wait three days for the perfect shot. Nick is sick of sand, sweat and waiting. He's looking forward to Groves Point. Nick decides that this is the last time he will be in the sandbox. He and Gus are in Port Fujairah. They make it back to port after blowing an Iranian gunboat out of the water after said gunboat tried to blow them up. No survivors. Nick and Gus could care less. They are in Port Fujairah at the Harbor Club to meet the man who hired them, one Gil Montrose. The hit was sanctioned by the CIA and Montrose is the contact. Montrose tries to screw Nick on payment Nick is not pleased and has no problem letting Montrose know how close to death he is. Montrose backs down and payment if forwarded to Nick's account. They then part company. In the middle of the night four men appear. The four weren't nearly good enough. The four are now among the missing and Montrose is among the dead. After their return Nick tries to dissuade Jean from getting him involved in the problems of others. Jean isn't dissuaded and Nick decides to try to see if he can help. Nick convinces the parents of Jean's best friend that dealing drugs is a no no. His methods are far from civil, moral or humane. The parents caught the damned clue. Problem number one solved. Number two involves Jean's teacher Dimah Kader who is Muslim. Dimah is engaged to a US Marine. A Marine who's stationed in Afghanistan. The family is not pleased. Dimah's Uncle Naseer and cousin Saif have been involved in honor killing in the Middle East. Dimah is afraid she is next on their list. Nick can't stand Sharia Law and he removes Uncle Naseer. A heart attack rather like the one Montrose suffered. Nick also removes Saif when that moron charges through the school full of kids with a gun and takes shots at Dimah. Nick tackles the idiot and makes it look like Saif was shot when the gun they were both struggling for went off. Nick is grazed in the head but manages to kill Saif before he passes out. When he comes to he discovers that he's a hero. So begins one humorous and very good read. This one has Nick, Rachel, Jean, Gus, Gus's fiancée Tina, Deke, the CIA, murder, attempted murder, Nick's property in Carmel Valley, a new very trustworthy CIA Handler, some dirty CIA agents, a couple of dirty newscasters, Nick's old pals Tim and Grace from the US Marshals office, the AG's Office, Dan, Carol and Joe from Groves Point, the Kader family who keep trying to kill Nick, a yacht called the Shalimar, a high end prostitute, her pimp, a "hacker" chip, everyone's after, an old enemy of Nick's from his Delta days, a book signing tour, a few more deaths on that tour, Nick and family finding that living in peace is something that is apparently out of their reach and a Nick who's beginning to believe that a peaceful life is highly overrated. Just a great read full of humor, loads of action, new characters and worth way more than five Stars.

I liked it. I finished it. Seemed to be redundant and the banter was non stop. The violence didn't bother me I read a lot of this style. Just seemed like it was the same every chapter. Loved the 1st one.

Nick McCarty is an assassin-for-hire who was first introduced to us with the companion novel "Cold Blooded". He is a family man now but is still a psycho - a fact that the author takes great pains to continually point out to us. He has no sense of morality, yet maintains a protective and loving relationship with his wife and daughter. Hey if Dexter Morgan can do it, so can Nick, right? I enjoyed the plot of both of these books, which is why I kept reading. What I didn't enjoy was the dialogue and repetition. It wasn't realistic. In real life, it's occasionally okay to provide a one-word answer or even a grunt when someone makes a jibe at you. In real life, people don't keep throwing jibes at you, over and over and over - and always the same ones - while you keep responding in full paragraphs, outlining exactly how bad-ass you are. This is what annoyed me about both books. These interactions were occasionally broken up by well-written spurts of action, which partially mitigated the redundant scenes. This made the overall chore of reading the stories worth my while.

I am not a BK! If you read the series at least through Book 5 you will know what I mean. Entertaining pulp fiction. I do agree with his opinion of this country and its policies.

Nick and his merry band of family and friends provides us with innovative ways of righting wrongs in our society. I especially enjoy the humor Bernard Lee Deleo brings to the characters throughout his books. Bernard subtly points out problems with our so-called governmental intelligence agencies and their inefficient and counterproductive methods. I recommend all of the Nick McCarty books to all readers who are entertained with "good guys" kicking ass to the low life members of our society. Keep up the good work Bernard, Nick, Gus, Rachel, Deke, and especially Jean and best of luck for future novels.

Again all I can say is that I will look forward to the next book by Bernard Lee DeLeo, for it is a fun read with good dialogue.

Super Assassin Nick McCarty continues to build a body count second to none. In Style on top of that! The author Mr. DeLeo has quite the imagination as he builds a tight knit family of players (AKA Killers) I have actually laughed out loud during some of the most intense chapters because of the special way the characters intermingle. Most worthy of 5 star!
