Food Network darling Ray wants home cooks to become more "instinctual," and this assortment of quick meals is expansive enough to encourage even novices to wing it. The author hopes readers cook their way through the entire book; to that end, she organizes the recipes not by course or main ingredient (though there are indexes), but by number. The organization takes some getting used to. Helpful but occasionally jarring "tidbits" pop up everywhere, and many "recipes" make more than one dish, so cooking just one requires a fair amount of reading. For example, number 16 encompasses "Oregon-Style Pork Chops with Pinot Noir and Cranberries; Oregon Hash with Wild Mushrooms, Greens, Beets, Hazelnuts, and Blue Cheese; [and] Charred Whole-Grain Bread with Butter and Chives." Readers making just the hash must read around the instructions for the other two dishes. Still, the recipes are great. They vary in technique and ethnicity, and many give instructions on expanding the dish (after making Spicy Shrimp and Penne with Puttanesca Sauce, for example, "now try" omitting the olives and capers, swapping linguine for the penne, reducing the number of shrimp, and adding lump crab meat and mussels to make Frutti di Mare and Linguine). As Ray would say, "Yummo." (Nov.) Copyright © Reed Business Information, a division of Reed Elsevier Inc. All rights reserved.

Rachael Ray appears daily on the Food Network as host of 30-Minute Meals, $40 a Day, and Inside Dish. She is the author of nine best-selling cookbooks, most recently 30 "Minute Get Real Meals. Rachael lives in the Adirondacks.

The thing I love about Rachel's cookbooks is that I feel like they are for real people with real budgets who like to cook. You still get the occasional recipe with expensive ingredients that are harder to find, but the vast majority are simple, and taste fabulous! My husband always gets a smile on his face when I take this book off the shelf. I also love the variety in this cookbook, and that the recipes are all truly meant to be full meals. There are not a ton of photos in the book, but the recipe titles alone were enough to make you salivate! We've probably made at least 50 of the recipes in here, and have only found 1 that we wouldn't repeat. The chili-lime salmon over warm corn and black bean salad and the cold peanut noodles are now two of my absolute staples, and have been loved by my entire family - including a very picky niece and nephew. I highly recommend this, and her Big Orange Cookbook for two solid cookbooks with plenty of variety to keep you busy for months!

Most of the recipes I have tried in this book, I will cook again. This book is easy to read and has wonderful images of the prepared food. It's fun to follow along with each day, although I have skipped ahead because I just couldn't wait to try something that was towards the end. Very few days have we skipped because the kids didn't like the look of the picture. We play "30 Minute Meals" and cook the recipes together, like it was her show. Of course, I am Rachel. They have even eaten a few more veggies this way. I like that the book is large, and it was in new condition when I got it. A great bargain price for a new cookbook! I would recommend this book and this seller.

This is one of my favorite cookbooks! So many awesome ideas. I've made a ton of recipes from here and I love love love them. There's a good mix of healthy and unhealthy recipes, though it seems like all of her recipes are pretty easy to healthy-up a bit if needed :)

It's great!!!

After reading some reviews I was skeptical but now am so glad I bought this book. To those who said "It's not in any order. It's not grouped by meat, etc"---that's what an index is for. This book is set up in an entirely different format, hence the title! Another comment was that the recipes have "no flavor". When you first look at the recipe and see a long list of spices, etc. you think oh, this will have flavors that really pop. I think what happens is that the flavors all blend together so well that it gives you more of a well-seasoned dish instead of one that bowls you over or hits you on the head with heat or intensity. And yes, it does take the average person more than 30 minutes to prepare most of these meals, but that certainly won't make me stop using them. I have always "fixed dinner", but now I am really enjoying actually cooking. Even if I don't like some of the recipes, they are still fun to read and to pull information from. I used to look at recipes with a long list of ingredients and panic. Now I find that I have those things in my pantry as basics! It is a fun and informative book.

I like Rachael Ray, it took some time. The first time I saw her was on her daily talk show and in the beginning she was this annoying, loud woman who used too much oil and fat in her recipes. But she grew on me! Now I really like her. And her food looks so delicious on tv, so I had to get a book!! I've had this book for two years, but didn't use it until recently. The reason? No pictures (well, there's a few on the pages in the middle, but just a handful, and there are 365 recipes in the book!) and odd ingredients (many of them you can't find in my country) Also buying all this stuff, like three different types of fresh herbs.. well it's costly! So I put the book away, got a job and never saw another episode of daytime tv again! A couple of years later on, I got the Scandinavian equal of Tivo, started taping Rachael Ray and was inspired again. I took out her book and started cooking, been going through a few recipes now and some of the dishes are just great! Love it! She does use a lot of foreign ingredients, so I have to skip some recipes and too many of them contain mushrooms (which I do not like) but I keep seeing Rachael Ray cooking and talking when I study the recipes which makes it all so much easier and fun! My only complaint now is that she could still have produced more photos AND I found out all the recipes are online on her website..I might some of the other books she has written in the future and I will definitely continue watching the show - and the cooking. If you like the show, her food and is confident enough to cook without seeing pictures of the final result, then this book is for you!

did I mention that I love RR? great recipe book!

Who doesn't like Rachel? Not too many people I bet. yes, some of her ingredients may be a little difficult to find, particularly in smaller towns, but I live in Philadelphia, and not only have numerous farmer's markets April through Oct but both the Italian Market and Reading Terminal. so I don't have a problem locating any ingredient. You can always try a substitute item, and make the recipe your own. I found them simple enough to prepare, Trying one of her steak dishes tonight should be interesting. If you want easy meals, this is the book.
